President's Note

Dear Friends, Partners, Well-Wishers
and Communities of ASMITA ,

As we gather to reflect on the past year's journey (2023-24), it brings me immense joy and gratitude to welcome you to ASMITA's first Annual Report. This report is not just a compilation of facts and figures; it is a testament to the power of collective effort, resilience, and unwavering dedication to our mission.

ASMITA, a youth-led feminist organization, was born out of a vision to create a society where every individual, regardless of gender, has the opportunity to thrive. Over the past year, we have worked tirelessly to turn this vision into reality. Our journey has been marked by significant milestones, inspiring stories, and impactful initiatives that have empowered countless young people to become advocates for gender equality and social justice.

In our inaugural year, we have focused on building a strong foundation for our organization. Through workshops and community outreach we have engaged with diverse communities, amplifying the voices of those who are often unheard.

Our achievements would not have been possible without the relentless efforts of our dedicated team, volunteers, and supporters. Your passion and commitment have driven our success and have been the bedrock of our growth. I extend my heartfelt thanks to each one of you for your invaluable contributions.

As we look ahead, we remain steadfast in our commitment to advancing gender equality and empowering the next generation of leaders. The journey is long, and the challenges are many, but with your continued support, we are confident that we can create a more just and equitable world.

Thank you for being a part of ASMITA's story. Together, we will continue to break barriers, challenge stereotypes, and build a future where everyone has the opportunity to shine.

With gratitude and hope,

Ankita

Education and mobility Program reach out

Through Jugni program of ASMITA we have reached out to 3 villages and 180 minority girls, out of this 60 were went out of village for either work or to study. This program mainly focus on the mobility of minority girls in the village.

Milestone

My name is Yasmin Praveen and my father's name is Mustaqim Ansari. I live in Dumarbeda village. Our society discourages Muslim girls from getting an education and venturing far from home after the age of 15.

I met Jiya Naz who is a community mobilizer working for ASMITA as a part of Jugni program and she wanted to form girls group in our village. During a group meeting, Jiya Ji spoke about the importance of education and encouraged us to pursue our goals beyond our village. Previously, I was too shy to speak up in public. But after attending the meeting, I felt empowered and began to express myself openly. I spoke about the importance of teamwork and continuous learning. The group not only organizes meetings but also provides training programs. These programs help us overcome limitations placed on girls and empower us to become capable individuals. We are trained to intervene if we witness violence in our village.

As we reflect on the past year, our hearts swell with pride. Asmita—the embodiment of resilience, courage, and unwavering commitment—has woven itself into the fabric of change. But this is not the end; it’s a mere chapter in our saga.

Looking ahead, we see a tapestry of possibilities. In the next year, we’ll amplify our voices, not as a cacophony, but as a harmonious chorus. We’ll march, write, and dance—our steps echoing across generations. Our safe spaces will expand, embracing those who seek refuge from storms of prejudice. We’ll lobby, educate, and dismantle barriers, knowing that each brick removed brings us closer to equality.

Our vision is audacious: a world where authenticity thrives, where every identity is celebrated, and where feminism isn’t a label—it’s a way of life. Asmita will be the compass guiding us through uncharted waters. We’ll celebrate victories, wipe away tears, and hold each other up.

So, dear warriors, let’s raise our banners higher. Let’s dream fiercely, act boldly, and love recklessly. The future awaits, and Asmita—the torchbearer of hope—will illuminate the path.
